

KENNY LOGAN GETS TO LOOK HIS GIFT HORSE IN THE MOUTH

Like many women, Gabby Logan decided to treat the man in her life to a new jumper for Christmas – although not of the woolly variety. The sports presenter bought husband Kenny, 37, a share in a racehorse named – aptly enough – Super Kenny.

The French-listed four-year-old is in training with Nicky Henderson through Highclere Thoroughbred Racing and made quite an impression on the couple when they met him last week (right), joining their fellow syndicate owners at Seven Barrows in Berkshire.

“I was instantly smitten,” said Gabby, who this week started a new job presenting a lunchtime news show on Radio 5. “Super Kenny was as much a gift to myself as it was to Kenny. He is a fine-looking horse with an amazingly calm demeanour. Over the next few years I think we are going to have a lot of fun with him.”

A love of racing and horses is something shared by both their families. Kenny’s mother and brother are both former three-day eventers, Gabby’s ex-footballer dad Terry Yorath is passionate about the sport, while her granddad was a bookmaker.

But despite the fact that putting money on the horses is in her blood, this was one occasion where Gabby, 36, could not resist hedging her bets. “I also bought him some socks,” she confessed.

